The Chief Commissioner of Lands was responsible for the administration of Crown lands under successive governments (Colony of Vancouver Island, Colony of British Columbia, and Province of British Columbia) until 1911. In 1929 the Minister delegated authority for Crown lands to the Lands Branch, headed by the Superintendent of Lands.

This series consists of Crown land pre-emption records. Pre-emption was a method of selling Crown land which had not been fully surveyed, designed to quickly provide temporary title or permission to occupy land to incoming settlers, for purposes of building a homestead and commencing agriculture. The process was formally established under the 1870 Land Ordinance (although the earliest pre-emptions began in 1859) and was terminated by the 1970 Land Act. Under this process, individuals (as well as companies and partnerships) could purchase land, but grants to this land were not issued until specified improvements and residency requirements had been completed, and the land had been fully surveyed.

Although details of the pre-emption process varied over the years, it generally consisted of the following steps:

- A rectangular block of vacant, non-reserved Crown land was selected (normally up to 160 acres, but sometimes more)
- The land was staked and a written application was submitted
- A Certificate of Pre-emption was issued in triplicate (copies to the pre-emptor, the local office, and the Department in Victoria)
- After improvements, residency qualification, and land surveying, a Certificate of Improvement was issued and the land purchased at a discount rate or at no further charge
- A Crown Grant was issued and ownership of the land passed into private hands
- Responsibility for keeping records of the land now passed to the Land Registry Office of the Attorney General, unless the new owner defaulted on taxes, in which case it reverted to the Crown.

A pre-emption file may consist of all, or a portion of the above named records. Most volumes are arranged numerically by pre-emption number, although there are many cases where individual documents from files are spread out throughout an entire volume. There are also some pre-emption numbers that are missing from volumes.

The series consists of Crown land pre-emption records in two sub-series: certificates of pre-emption, with associated certificates of improvement and certificates of purchase, and pre-emption registers. Each sub-series consists of bound, indexed volumes arranged by land district and division.

One or more volumes cover the pre-emption registrations for each land district, and volumes 86-90 and 246-248 relate to railway lands on Vancouver Island, particularly in Cowichan and Nanaimo Districts (1884-1887).

Pre-emptions were generally numbered sequentially based on the Land Act enforced at the time. Sequences can be found in the collection based on the Land Acts of 1860, 1870, 1874, 1875 and 1884. The New Westminster land district also includes a sequence based on rural or country land pre-emptions. Some land districts maintained the same numbering sequence throughout the entire time period. If no date is mentioned in the description, the sequence is based on the 1884 Act.

The pre-emption registers (volumes 213-245; microfilm reels B13858-B13860) summarize the information from the certificates. Each volume covers the pre-emption registrations for a district.

The pre-emption registers are arranged in Lands Branch volume number order, volumes 1-27 (including three "a" volumes where two volumes are required for a district), followed by three unnumbered volumes that cover Fort St. John and Victoria. Each register lists pre-emptions in registration number order, with an alphabetical index of pre-emptors' names at the back. The following information is recorded: registration number, date of registration, pre-emptors name, lot number (not always recorded), acreage (for ca. 1915 on), certificate of improvement number (if issued), file number (sometimes), and remarks (either a code number, possibly accompanied by a date, or a phrase: "cancelled", "abandoned", or "no application or declaration received"). This information is hand-written in columns with printed headings.

Title based on contents of the series.

Transferred to the BC Archives by the Lands Branch on 11 May 1976.

For conservation reasons, BC Archives staff removed the pages from the bindings of many of the volumes, and placed the records in acid free folders and boxes.

The Genealogical Society of Utah microfilmed the pre-emption registers (volumes 213-245) in 2001. BC Archives staff microfilmed many of the volumes of the certificate of pre-emption record books in 2010 as part of a National Archival Development Program grant project.

Many of the volumes in GR-0112 were paginated prior to microfilming in the order the documents appeared in the original volumes. This was done in order to aid in the separation process prior to microfilming the collection.

Generally speaking, the original order has been maintained; however, researchers will discover that many documents were microfilmed without regard to the page number sequence.

Documents were reordered for a variety of reasons. The main reason was to gather documents relating to individual pre-emptions together in one location. Other reasons would include human error or the reordering of documents within individual pre-emption documents.

On several occasions this number appears on the back of the document. If there was no other information on the reverse of the page, it was not microfilmed and the pagination will not be immediately apparent without referring to the original document.

On other occasions, the pagination repeats (e.g. 1-320, 312-321). In these cases, the documents were microfilmed in the order they appeared prior to microfilming.

Documents that were not numbered in the original pagination were inserted using alphabetized numbers (e.g.: 321, 321A, 321B, 322). On several occasions, these documents remain unnumbered.

Documents that were found to be in multiple pieces were generally numbered this way as well (e.g. 322 [top], 322A [bottom]).

In some cases, the backing sheet was paginated as well. In these cases, both numbers will appear on the same image. Either there was no information on the back of the record, or the document was glued down so heavily that the information on the back of the document could not be retrieved without damaging the entire document.

Regardless, the documents appear on the microfilm in the order they were arranged at the time of filming.

The original volumes were rehoused in containers. Larger volumes were rehoused in two or three separate containers. The BC Archives maintains a list recording the location of these containers. Several volumes were paginated after the volumes were placed in these new containers. Researchers will note that the page numbers recycle to 1 whenever a new container begins. In these cases, the pagination will generally reflect the order of the present documents, rather than the order they would have appeared in the original volume. No guarantee can be made as to which system was used if only one container was used to house an individual volume, or multiple containers were numbered sequentially.

Researchers will need to scan the entire volume to ensure that they have located all the documents related to the pre-emptions they are trying to locate, as no guarantee can be made as to where the documents appear within the individual volumes.

Every attempt has been made to microfilm the backs of all the documents that have information on them. The originals still exist if researchers believe that a particular page was missed in the microfilming process.

Conservation restriction: use microfilm copy.

A finding aid in the form of a volume list is available for this series (see below). This volume list is arranged by land district. The inclusive dates of each register represent the date of the first and last pre-emption listed, not necessarily the earliest and latest pre-emption in the register.
